The image shows a web browser displaying the Wikipedia article for "World war". The sidebar on the left is highlighted with a black box and an arrow pointing to the "Introduction" link, which is underlined. The main content area shows the article's history, sections like "Etymology", and a sidebar on the right related to "War".

- Clicking on World war 1 and 2 :

The screenshot shows a web browser window with a dark green header bar. On the left, there's a logo for 'HISTORY' with a stylized eye icon. In the center, the word 'History' is displayed in blue. On the right, there are fields for 'User' (singh@project.ca) and 'Password' (*****), along with a 'Logout' link. Below the header, a large black and white photograph of World War II tanks and smoke is centered. To the left of the main content area, a vertical sidebar titled 'Menu' lists several options: Introduction, World wars 1 and 2, Country involved search in world map, World map, Documentaries or video gallery, Register Here, Cookie, Google, and a link to wikipedia.org. At the bottom of the sidebar, there are icons for W3C XHTML and W3C CSS. The main content area contains a detailed paragraph about World War II, followed by a link to the Wikipedia page. The browser's address bar shows 'https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/World_War_II'. The taskbar at the bottom of the screen displays various application icons.

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the Wikipedia page for 'World War I'. The page title is 'World War I' and it includes a sub-section 'From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia'. Below the title, there is a note about redirects and a brief summary of the war. The main content area features a large collage of historical photographs from World War I, including scenes of tanks, ships, and soldiers. A caption below the collage reads: 'Clockwise from the top: The road to Bapaume in the aftermath of the Battle of the Somme, 1916 - British Mark V tanks crossing the Hindenburg Line, 1918 - HMS Irresistible sinking after hitting a mine in the Dardanelles, 1915 - A British Vickers machine gun crew wearing gas masks during the Battle of the Somme, 1916 - German Albatros D.III biplane fighters near Douai, France, 1917'. The browser's address bar shows 'https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/World_War_I'. The taskbar at the bottom of the screen displays various application icons.

World War II or the Second World War, often abbreviated as WWII or WW2, was a global war that lasted from 1939 to 1945. It involved the vast majority of the world's countries—including all of the great powers—forming two opposing military alliances: the Allies and the Axis powers. In a total war directly involving more than 100 million personnel from more than 30 countries, the major participants threw their entire economic, industrial, and scientific capabilities behind the war effort, blurring the distinction between civilian and military resources. Aircraft played a major role in the conflict, enabling the strategic bombing of population centres and the only two uses of nuclear weapons in war to this day. World War II was by far the deadliest conflict in human history. It resulted in 70 to 85 million fatalities, a majority being civilians. Tens of millions of people died due to genocides (including the Holocaust), starvation, massacres, and disease. In the wake of the Axis defeat, Germany and Japan were occupied, and war crimes tribunals were conducted against German and Japanese leaders.

World War II is generally considered to have begun on 1 September 1939, when Nazi Germany, under Adolf Hitler, invaded Poland. The United Kingdom and France subsequently declared war on Germany on 3 September. Under the Molotov–Ribbentrop Pact of August 1939, Germany and the Soviet Union had partitioned Poland and marked out their "spheres of influence" across Finland, Romania and the Baltic states. From late 1939 to early 1941, in a series of campaigns and treaties, Germany conquered or controlled much of continental Europe, and formed the Axis alliance with Italy and Japan (along with other countries later on). Following the onset of campaigns in North Africa and East Africa, and the fall of France in mid-1940, the war continued primarily between the European Axis powers and the British Empire, with war in the Balkans, the aerial Battle of Britain, the Blitz of the UK, and the Battle of the Atlantic. On 22 June 1941, Germany led the European Axis powers in an invasion of the Soviet Union, opening the Eastern Front, the largest land theatre of war in history.

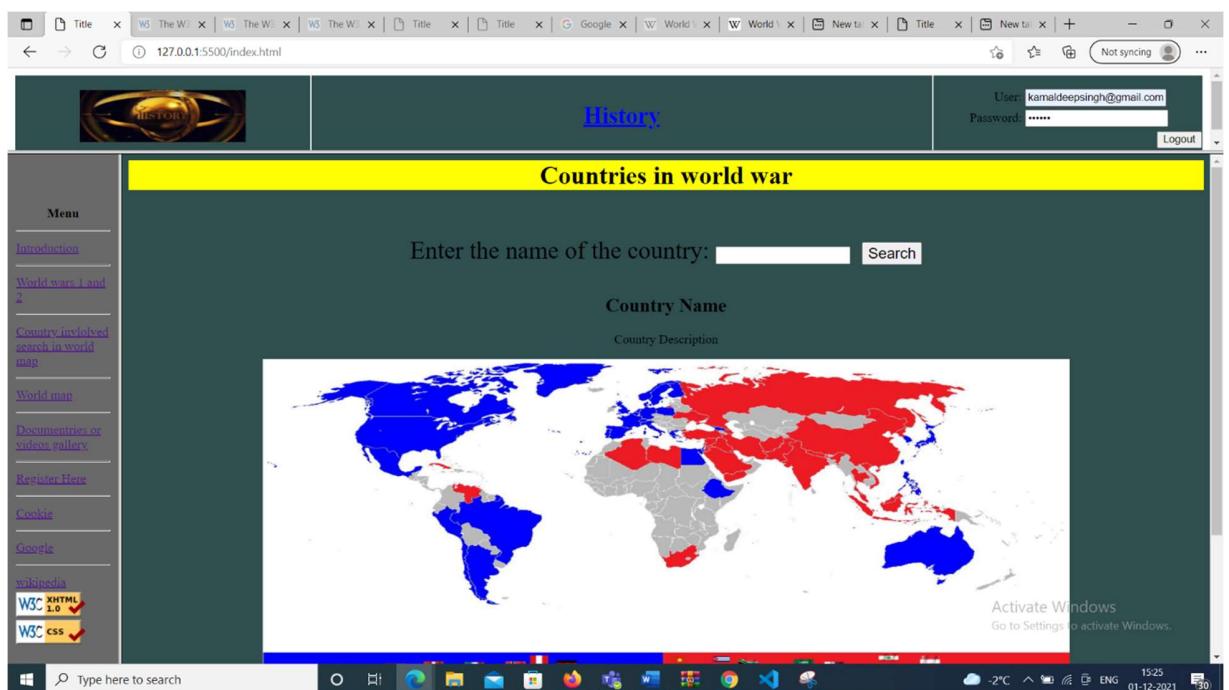

Japan, which aimed to dominate Asia and the Pacific, was at war with the Republic of China by 1937. In December 1941, Japan attacked American and British territories with near-simultaneous offensives against Southeast Asia and the Central Pacific, including an attack on the US fleet at Pearl Harbor which forced the US to declare war against Japan; the European Axis powers declared war on the US in solidarity. Japan soon captured much of the western Pacific, but its advances were halted in 1942 after losing the critical Battle of Midway; later, Germany and Italy were defeated in North Africa and at Stalingrad in the Soviet Union. Key setbacks in 1943—including a series of German defeats on the Eastern Front, the Allied invasions of Sicily and the Italian mainland, and Allied offensives in the Pacific—cost the Axis powers their initiative and forced it into strategic retreat on all fronts. In 1944, the Western Allies invaded German-occupied France, while the Soviet Union regained its territorial losses and turned towards Germany and its allies. During 1944 and 1945, Japan suffered massive territorial losses and the Allies captured the islands of Iwo Jima and captured key western Pacific islands.
